WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- A strong offshore flow event is expected to promote periods of gusty east winds and low relative humidity across Northern California on Monday 10/09/17.
- High fire danger across portions of Northern California through Monday, 10/09/17 due to gusty north to east wind and low humidity.
- Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:
- <https://alerts-v2.weather.gov/counties/CA>

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

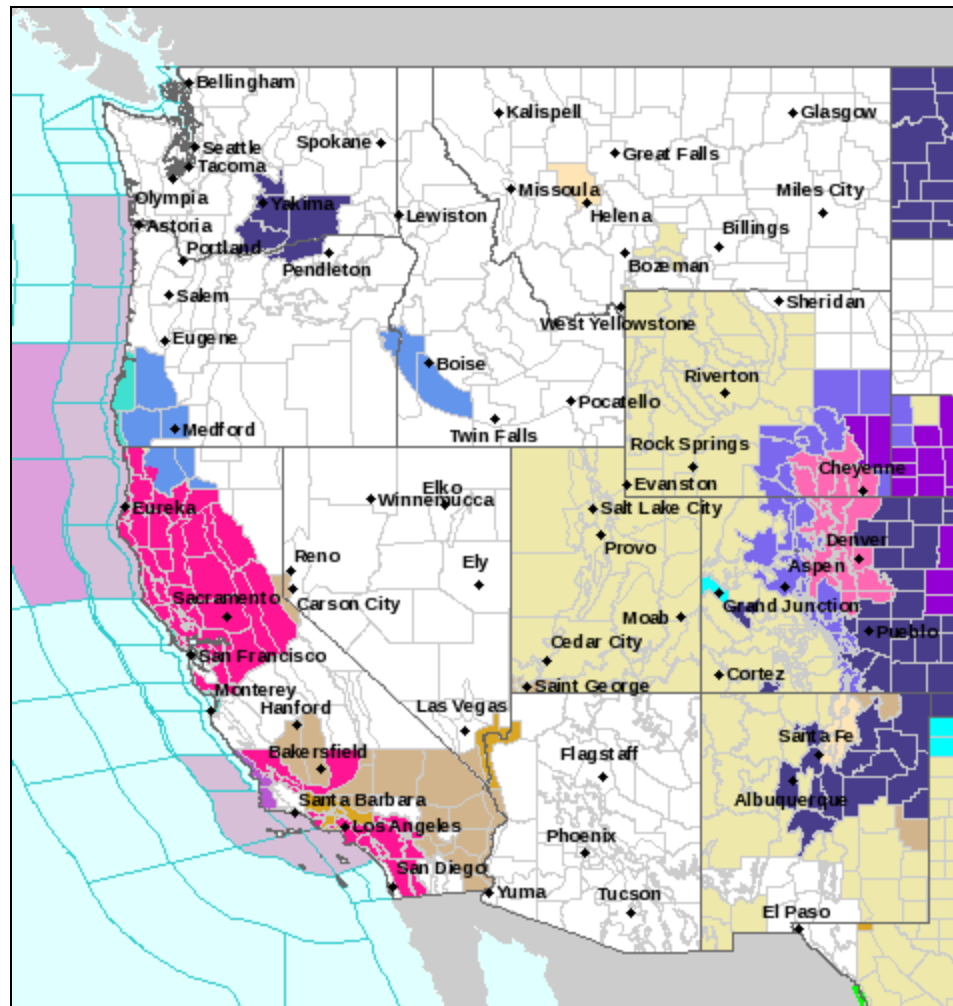

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

High pressure moving into the Pacific Northwest will generate more widespread, relatively strong, gusty N to E winds and low relative humidity (RH). "High Risk" of Significant Fire Potential is in place for many areas west of the Cascade/Sierra crest today into today. The Sacramento Valley/Foothills have windy conditions, and the wind will develop for the Mid Coast, North Coast and Diablo-Santa Cruz Mountains predictive service areas (PSAs) around midday. Wind speeds will be 10-22 mph with most gusts ranging from 30-40 mph, but local gusts around 45 mph will be possible. The winds will diminish significantly around midday today. Low RH (10-20%) and poor overnight recovery (less than 30% some places) will occur in many areas, even for some locations without much wind. A low pressure trough will arrive off shore later Tuesday then move inland and linger for the latter half of the week. This will cool things down region-wide. Rain does not look very likely from this trough, but RH will still increase quite a bit in the north while the southern half of the region remains quite dry. The warmest inland areas will be near 80 for the next few days and then mostly into the mid 70s the rest of the week except for Friday which will be the coolest day with highs near 70.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Offshore winds will decrease this evening and become light by Tuesday morning. Maximum temperatures will cool to the mid 50s to mid 60s across the mountains, but warm to the upper 70s and 80s in the valleys today. The entire region will see a few degrees of warming Tuesday as a weak ridge of high pressure aloft moves over California from the Pacific Ocean. Minimum humidity will be mainly in the single digits and teens both today and Tuesday. A Pacific trough will deepen over the West Coast bringing cooling and an increase in humidity Wednesday through the end of this week. Westerly winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas Wednesday through the end of this week.
